Nowadays we are living in the twenty first century while most of the technologies are going on creating to simplify learning and teaching languages day by day. Frank Smith said that one language sets you in a corridor for life, two languages open every door along the way. That is why, if we want to build a great country and bright future our children should be taught variety branches of study, especially language must be educated to achieve success in every area of life.

At these days, learning English language is being developed as well as a large numbers of people are learning this language. The results of that teaching English language methods are being improved, also simplified with modern technologies year by year. Therefore the methods should be updated by adding new facts and figures, information which is related to the lesson, and pedagogic new techniques. It is not important that to create concrete form for the lesson because it is impossible to put lesson process in one shape. Lessons should be different style in a different situation.

However there are some kind of lesson development for teachers to use during the lesson. They are: 1) Topic of the lesson; 2) Revision part of previous lesson; 3) Explanation of new lesson; 4) Part of entertainment which helps to learn effectively; 5) The end of the lesson and part of giving homework

Firstly, teachers should come to the lesson prepared with presentation, information which is related to today's topic. The first thing teacher must do before starting new topic is reminding previous lesson to students. Assuming the average class duration is only an hour or less, that leaves a whole lot of time in the day to forget everything a student just learned. Children won't retain as much information as adults, so repetition is key in English for young learners. For this it is effective that to make conversation about that lesson as well as ask questions about the topic. Especially, using some kind of handouts, tasks, also games such as "Hangman", "Memory game with card pairs", "20 Questions", "Simon Says" and etc. These are really helpful to remind previous lesson to students and also they help to teacher to attract students for the lesson.

Secondly, after reviewing last lesson, new topic is begun to explain with full of attention. It is vital which things are used to teach. Teacher should utilize some technologies such as computer, television, to explain the topic with presentation and videos. Also, Visual Aids: Utilize pictures, diagrams, and videos to aid comprehension and stimulate visual learners. It will be interesting and clear to understand. Topic should be taught detailed to each student, ins and outs of rules are explained clearly with simple way. After explaining teacher should give more examples to make more understandable lesson. During the lesson groups' students should be divided into pairs or small groups where they are challenged to complete a task. This teaching method promotes peer-to-peer respect and develops an understanding of each others' interests, skills and needs.

Thirdly, Youngsters are more excited about learning, if you make the subject fun. Childhood education without games is like chicken wings without seasoning or sauce. You simply can't have one without the other. Games are especially effective teaching methods for young learners, because they are able to learn without realizing it. Active games let them expel some bottled up energy and quiet ones challenge and require concentration. For example, Hands-on Activities - incorporate games, puzzles, and interactive tasks in group make learning enjoyable and memorable.

What are some games to try?

1. Turn lessons into songs

Every English learner, both native and not, is familiar with, at the very least, one classic music. Certainly, the ABCs(musical version) are what we turn to for a reminder of what letter comes after Q. Although the middle part requires a bit more brain power, the song offers English speakers a comfortable reference point for all their alphabetical needs. Turning vocabulary, grammar, and dialogues into catchy tunes is a fabulous method for teaching English to young learners.

2. Kahoot! Engage students in an interactive quiz with Kahoot! The kids can connect to the website under the code you give them. You will post questions, and they select the answer anonymously or in teams. You can opt for a lighthearted, non-academic quiz to let kids unwind and have fun, or you can tie it into your lesson plan. Regardless of your choice, this time-limit quiz is guaranteed to be a hit among kids.

3. Storytelling is one of the best game to learn lesson. It is way of engaging young minds through storytelling, which enhances imagination, language skills, and cognitive development. They should create funny story using today's vocabulary and grammar , structure . It helps them them remember clearly.

4. Simon Says game's rules are simple: Children are prompted to execute your directives when prefaced by the phrase “Simon says.” Whether it’s “Simon says jump” or “Simon says turn around,” they follow along. To keep them on their toes, you’ll interject commands that lack the “Simon says” preface. Any child who carries out the instruction is eliminated from the game. The game continues until only one person remains. The winner earns the opportunity to step into the role of Simon. This game helps your students work on their listening skills in a fun, interactive way.

5. Freeze Dance. Play music out loud in your class, and encourage children to dance. As soon as the music stops, children have to freeze on the spot, holding whatever position they’re in. It’s a great game for getting everyone active and can be used for a quick break when you notice your pupils getting bored.

In conclusion, teaching youngsters is important skill because of its responsibility. Also, school teachers play an integral role in children development by fostering basic intellectual and social foundations. School teachers should implement several teaching methods that challenge students to express themselves while learning. Educational generation are our bright future and we must take care of their education.
